The Outlook.

The December Magazine Number of The Outlook will be its annual Book Number.

The Outlook will be, it is believed, the first of the weekly papers to form the custom of printing each year a special number fully illustrated and containing not only descriptions and reviews of the important holiday books, but also literary articles of special interest of the season. This year a group of articles on artistic book-making will form a prominent feature of the number. Mr. Theodore D. Vinton, the head of the famous firm of artists printers, Mr. George Wharton Edwards, designer, and Mr. E. D. North, the well-known bibliophile and expert in books, will contribute to this series, and the illustrations will be of high order. Other features will make this number, it is believed, more attractive than any of its predecessors put forth by The Outlook Company, 150 Avenue C, New York.

Camerata stimulates liver, builds up and invigorates. Never sickens, weakens or grips, etc.

Bookmen's Advice.

Free Medical Advice

You need a doctor many times when you don't call one. You suffer pain in fifty forms and yet won't call the doctor, but come and see that the pain "will go away after a while." And, too, you know by experience, that that first visit of the doctor is generally followed by many others, with the inevitable consequence of a big bill "for professional services." You don't know what to do for yourself or what to take. But suppose that you could get free, absolutely free, the advice of one of the most

Eminent Physicians

In the United States? You can. The physician is right there. He has an office in the building, he has a staff of correspondents to assist him, and anyone and everyone, who needs medical advice is invited to write to him. It's his duty, his health or mother's or the health of any member of the family you may write about it, sure of a careful reading of your letter, sure of a conscientious diagnosis of your case.

Sure of a Cure

If you are possible. Every letter will be held as a strictly confidential communication.

Remember these facts:

We offer you medical advice from one of the most eminent practitioners in the United States, whether our medicines suit your particular case or not. We offer you this advice at the cost of the two cent stamp which it will take to bring your letter to our office. Address: The Medical Department, Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

What is a condition?

The old story about the French marquis who opined that the Almighty would think twice before damning a gentleman of quality, doubtless finds an echo in all gentility. "Amalgamation"—bosh, but there is another tale in Evelyn's diary which puts what I believe to be the English position as pointedly as the other does that of the ancient regime: "March 16, 1662—Y told a friend of mine who accompanied him to the gallows and gave him some advice that he did not value dying of a rush and hoped and believed God would deal with him like a gentleman."

A GOOD INDIAN.

He Hired a Horse. In His Savage Days In Which to Take a Ride.

Jack Stillwell, so well known to Kanawha phantoms, is now a sober and well behaved citizen at the little town of Anacostia in Oklahoma. Stillwell and his first fame by passing through the Indian lines surrounding the position of Forestry on the Arapaho in 1868 and getting to Fort Walla for reinforcements. Later he served through Custer's campaigns and still later appeared as one of the great events in Buffalo Bill's Wild West show.

When Oklahoma was opened to settlers, Stillwell located at El Reno, where for a term he was police judge. The lawlessness in the territory took many of her citizens up to Wichita to the sessions of the federal court. When Jack Stillwell went up, the people of Wichita usually knew that he was there. He, with some of his friends, was to the habit of living up the town by various kinds of freakish sport.

On one occasion he hired a horse and they were going to take a drive over town when the undertaker learned that there was to be a funeral and vetoed the thing just as Jack was crawling into the body of the vehicle. Jack tried to argue that they had paid for the use of it and could use it in it if they chose, but they had to give up the ride.

One evening, after they had been in town several days and were feeling tolerably good, Jack and some of his friends were walking down the street when they came to a bright, newly painted barber's pole.

Jack sought out the proprietor, found what the pole cost and bought it on the spot. Then the crowd, hoisted it on their shoulders and went on down the street. They had not gone far before they "met up" with a policeman, who, thinking they had, of course, stolen the pole, arrested the crowd and took them to the city hall. There they put up a small cash bond and were released until morning. When morning came, they appeared for trial, and Jack explained that the pole was his and he had paid for it; that he was going to take it to Oklahoma, where the natives had never seen a barber's pole, and it would be an object of curiosity and wonder. Then he sent for the barber from whom he had purchased the pole, and the result was that they were all released.

Whereupon they shouldered their pole and marched down the street again, to be arrested by another policeman and brought up before the judge again. As soon as the judge saw them he ordered the officer to let them go. They started out in another direction, only to be arrested for the third time. In the end the chief of police was obliged to issue a general order stating that the pole belonged to Stillwell and he should not be arrested. At the same time he intimated to Jack that they had had sport enough and it would be well for him to take his pole and return to his native wilds.—Guthrie Leader.

Could See Through His Nose.

Several authors at the end of the sixteenth and beginning of the seventeenth century mention a man who had lost both his eyes, but could see through his nose. An account of him is given in the "Occultus Artificialis Telescopium" of Joannis Zain. It appears that he lived in the country and had the misfortune to lose his right eye when a child, and his left, when somewhat older, by falling from a cherry tree upon a spike, which mutilated his nose and cheek. After the wound had healed he found that he could see, through the cavity of his nose, not merely the daylight, but the colors of the flowers around him. During the next five or six years he learned to distinguish objects brought under his nose. M. E. Duillet, a French physiologist, explains the phenomenon by supposing that the membrane, and particularly the retina at the base of the eye, were sound, and that an opening communicating with the nose permitted the light to reach the retina through the nose. It is well known that if light enters a dark room by a narrow aperture it will form an image or picture on a screen there, and something of the kind happened in the case of the man who saw with his nose.
